The Pensacola Archaeological Society is offering opportunities for students to help in sorting artifacts that UWF students will unearth at several archaeological sites this summer. Imagine finding artifacts in the excavated dirt that were lost, buried or discarded hundreds of years ago. Find the answers to fascinating questions about 2000 years of Pensacola's past, like; How did an alligator get in the Commanding Officer's trash pit inside the British fort? Why did the some Indians have better guns than the Spanish? The sorting will take place at FPAN headquarters on Main Street Wednesday and Friday during the summer. You can make your own schedule for sorting in the field and at UWF from the many days that will be available.

A one-day training session will be scheduled for all those interested.
