The College Reach-Out Program (CROP) is funded by the Florida Department of Education to provide pre-collegiate programming that serves low income first generation students of parents who have not completed a bachelor’s degree.

Services and activities are designed to improve the educational motivation and preparation of participating students. Services and activities take place during the academic year and summer. In addition, students in eighth through eleventh grades have the opportunity to participate in a one week summer program.

- Help students develop effective study skills, time management, critical thinking, and other learning skills.
- Encourage students to become self-directed, independent learners.
- Motivate students to pursue a post secondary education.
