If the UWF proposal for use of Triumph funds is approved, the city and county have agreed to give UWF the former Tech Park near downtown to house the Innovation Institute as well as space for community and industry partners. Founders’ Week tradition will commence in 2018. The week of April 16th has been designated. Many activities are planned.

The Askew Institute is an initiative under the President’s Next Big Thing program and Provost funding for Distinguished Professor. Wade Jeffrey is working on developing opportunities.

Institutional Communication changes in structure were made in hope of better managing university communication and message. Communication to the public is to be handled differently than internal communication. A Student Ad agency is proposed and would be run by student interns to gain work experience and develop a portfolio of work.

A new campus-wide calendar is in the works.

Academic Calendar concerns have been reviewed. Possible adjustments to academic calendar dates would need BOG approval for future years not previously established.

Q: Will CANVAS be called eLearning?
A: No discussion of changing the name of online course system, only the platform.

Final Capital Campaign number was $64.4 Million.

Q: How is enrollment looking?
A: Flat enrollment with shrinking the freshman class and recruiting higher achieving students.
