

The Benefits of Follett ACCESS

- Lower pricing on course materials
- Students have access to their course materials by the start of classes
- The correct course materials are delivered as part of a student's tuition and fees and provided electronically (digital content).

FAQs

How does Follett ACCESS work?

The Follett ACCESS program takes the hassle out of course material buying because course material costs are covered as part of the course charge. This allows every enrolled student access to all required materials on day one.

Will I save money?

Yes! Course materials are provided at a discounted price.

How do I access my materials?

If you sign up through Follett Access, you'll receive an email from the UWF Bookstore the week before classes begin. This email will have a subject line of "Activate Your Digital Content", which will contain an activation link, or "Your Digital Books Have Arrived", which will contain an access code.

If your email contains an access code, login to your course in Canvas and follow your instructor's directions to register your code.

What if I drop a course after I opt-in?

If you drop your course before the end of the University drop/add period, your charge will be removed and your access to the course materials will be revoked. If you drop or withdraw after the initial drop/add period, you'll need to contact the UWF Bookstore to discuss options.

What are students saying about Follett ACCESS?

Students at other campuses who have participated in a similar program love the convenience and ease of accessing their course materials...and being ready for classes on day one!

If my professor has recommended course materials, will those be included in the program?

Only materials identified by your professor or campus as "required" are included as part of the program. All "recommended" materials will be available for purchase at the UWF Bookstore and <http://uwfshop.com>.
